“ My father and I met Ross in 2004 on the Corvallis historical tours and have enjoyed running into him ever since-- often at the Public Library. Ross had a strong interest in our local history, extending all the way down to our sidewalk markers, of which he made a study. I especially loved his sketches of old houses. He was a friendly soul to the end, and one of the few people around who would address my 82-year-old father as "Young Man". He will be missed.
