“ I love you mom! I will miss you soooo much and I'm sad that you are not just a phone call away. You were faithful to call and see how I'm doing. When I couldn't answer you left a message and called me "your busy little girl". :-) I still have one of those messages on my voicemail and will cherish it now.

I still make your Christmas cookies and we always will. Jamey's nephew called your Almond Bark Balls "Patty Balls" because they were special from you. As I look around my home and my closet, I will treasure the gifts you have given with special memories. You always wanted us to have special things just from you. They hold a special meaning now, mom.

I'm so glad I got to talk to you on that Wednesday (our Anniversary). So glad you got to talk to Josh and Annie too. I'm sorry you didn't get to come out to AZ and see my life here. There was so much to show you. I know you are happy for me and I know you would have LOVED our gelato. You would tell me that you were testing the gelato in the grocery stores and I thought that was cute.

I'm happy for you now, mom. You are in no pain, you have no more tears, you are with your mom, dad and sister and of course with Jesus now, and forever! Someday, we will be together again, happy and healthy forever and ever. I take comfort in your faith in Christ and all you taught me about my own faith. Thank you for making me memorize all those Bible verses in Awana. Thank you for making our church a strong part of our lives. It was during those hard times in life that you taught me where to find the foundations of truth and the importance of fellowship. I will follow your example to my own family.

You hold a special place in my heart that no one else can. I will see you soon. I love you mom!!
