“ In my job as office manager at Camp Kilowan in the mid-1970s, one of my assignments was to order the food and supplies for our cooks. I had never done anything like that before, and I felt like I was in over my head. The first time I placed a call to the food co-op, Sandy was the person who answered the phone, and realizing how insecure i was, she proceeded to make everything as easy and clear for me as possible. Her kindness and patience meant the world to me.

*A couple of years later I was working at Wilson Motors and was doing not only my own cashiering job but also filling in on the contracts/titles desk that had recently been vacated. Lo and behold, who should be hired to fill that job but Sandy, who did not have any direct experience in this area. Now it was my turn to be kind and patient and make everything as easy and clear for her as possible while she learned her new job.*

We both enjoyed the fact that our paths crossed in these two ways.
